Theodore Kohn & Brother have a large and seclect supply of dry goods, boots, shoes, hats, and notions of all sorts. Give them call.

Mr. Sherrod Reeves got his ankle sprained at the fire on Wednesday last, and Edward Anderson fainted from being over-heated.

A DESTRUCTIVE FIRE-

On Wednesday morning last, about hall-past 9 o'clock, while our city was resting in comparative quiet, the alarm of fire was sounded throughout her streets and alley-ways. The members of our d Herent fire organizations repaired with all possible haste to their engines, and truck and ladders, and from thence they proceeded, with commendable promptuess, to the scene of the conflagation. When the fire was discovered it was confined to the upper story of Mr. Harpin Riggs' machine shop, and it is supposed to have originated from a spark from the chimney. The building was very dry, and the flames spread with such maddening fury that, in a short time, the fire was communicated to a blacksmith shop close by:

The Young Americas, the Comets and the Elliott boys, went to work manfully as soon as they reached the spot, but found it impossible to check he flames, in the buildings mentioned. They did succeed, however, in saving a quantity of lumber and tools. The carriage repository was cut down after our gallant firemen had hauled from it a number of carriages and buggies. This act prevented the flames from spreading over to the large two-story wood and paint shop situated a short distance off, and somewhat allayed the apprehension, entertained oy many, that Mr. Kiggs' fine residence would be consumed also. But even with the precautionary. measure adopted in razing the carriage repository to the ground, the flames would have finally reached other buildings, had The wind not been against them, and thus Orangeburg would have been once more placed at the mercy of the ruthless fire fiend.

Mr. Riggs' loss is between five and six thousand dollars, without a cent's insurance. Misfortunes seem to crown upon him of late with double severity. It was only a week agothat we chrotticled the lose of his right hand, and now to-day we have to record this second misfortune. But in both he has the sympathy of the entire community; for the caldutities to which he has been so severely subjected; not only fall heavily upon a hard working and useful citizen, but also upon the interests of Orangeburg: His cotion gin, planing machine, turnac, had become indispensable adjuncts to the building up of our city. They are now gone. But it is to be hoped that Mr. Riggs will soon build them up again. The sound of his shop bell at morning noon, and night, followed by the shrill whistle of his engine, had become familar s unds to ds, and we hope to hear them again soon.

And now, as a legitimate corollary from the fire, let us make a few suggestions to our City Fathers:

It was apparent to every one, on Wednesday morning last, that our fire department is sadly deficient In the first place, the engines were too Office. scantily manned for active and useful service, and in the second, there was not enough water conveniently. near to have drowned a church mouse. In saying this we do not pretend, to insinuate that any of our firemen have ever been lukewarm where duty called them. On the contrary-and we mention the fact with pleasure-the members of our several fire companies have been daring and energetic on every occasion, that has called them out; but it is impossible for them to work without proper organization, and a sufficient supply of water. Let our City Authorities do their duty by levying a tax for the Better equipment of the Fire Department, and we venture the assertion that fires will not be so destructive thereafter. Our citizens should not expect protection from fire when the means of providing against it are withheld from our Fire Companies. We hope Mayor Boliver will fay this matter before Council.
